

AP[®] Online Scores for Students

AP Students Will Get Scores Online This Year

As you may have heard, students will receive their AP scores online this July. This convenient new system replaces the old paper score reports, which will no longer be mailed.

To help you communicate this important change to AP teachers, students and parents, we've developed an awareness toolkit, available here for download.

Here are the key things AP Coordinators can do to help with the transition:

- 1 Inform students that they MUST have a College Board account in order to access their AP scores online in July. Direct students to sign up for a free College Board account at apscore.org as early as possible.
 - Encourage AP teachers to make this announcement in their classrooms and assign the students the homework task of setting up a College Board account.
 - Many students will already have an account if they've ever registered for the SAT or participated in other College Board programs. Students who already have an account should sign in and confirm that they have the correct username and password.
 - Remind them to keep their username and password in a safe place.
 - Students with a College Board account will receive email updates about how and when they can access their scores.
- 2 Encourage students to complete two important fields on their first 2013 AP answer sheet: their student identifier (student ID number) and email address.
 - Local student identifier or student ID number (Field T): If students have a local identifier and provide it on their AP answer sheet, they can use it to access their scores. If your students have more than one student ID (e.g., state level and school level) select which is most appropriate to use for reporting AP Exam scores.
 - Email address (Field U): Students who provide their email address will receive a notification when their AP scores are available.
- 3 Remind students that they MUST hold on to their AP number.
 - For security reasons, students will need to provide their AP number (or their student ID number, if they provided it on their answer sheet) in order to view their scores online and send scores to colleges.

Thank you for the important role you are playing in leading this change for your students. Please note that in the coming weeks, some of your students may also receive email directly from the College Board about AP Online Scores for Students.

Stay tuned for more updates via email and on our website.
