

Instructions for Class Discussion on Siddhartha and Jane Eyre

We'll be having an honest class discussion of both Jane Eyre and Siddhartha on Monday. In order for this to be a success, I'm asking a few things of you:

- If you, for any reason, haven't yet genuinely finished reading either text, do so before next Monday.
- Bring your copies of both novels to class.
- For each book, identify two passages, moments, or quotations that you feel are outstandingly significant for some reason; you won't be forced to explain why. Just mark the pages.
- Use the attached "questions stems" to write a total of four discussion questions. You will not be forced to answer these questions; they're for your classmates' brains to deal with. Here are a few cute, little guidelines:
 - Each question should start with something close to one of the "stems" I've provided.
 - Write each question legibly on a separate notecard with your name on the back.
 - Try to include at least one well-planned "Level 5 – Evaluation" question.
 - Try to craft a question that can provoke an interesting response.
 - Focus on the aspects of the readings that interest you the most.
