Danielle is a credible source for accurate school gossip, but she is also over-dramatic; she is always involved in some sort of school drama—yes, even the club. She has actually told Marc: “I was told by Lindsay that Carly was cheating on you with John. But you know how Lindsay can be...”

Anna, she’s an interesting character, but nonetheless she is good friends with Marc. (By the way, she actually likes him as well.) She revealed to Danielle, as they sat together on the bus on Friday morning, that: “I was talking to Marc, and he is convinced that Carly is cheating on him because Carly has been with John for the last two nights. I guess Marc is going to break up with her.”

“Marc happens to be absolutely stunning. He’s a major flirt, though.” - Sara

“Marc also has dated six people in the last year, but before that he dated one person for 3 years (8th -10th grade).” - Lindsay

Carly was overheard saying, after one week of dating: “I really enjoy hanging out with Marc; He’s cute, funny, and all around awesome. I think I’m in love with him.”

Mr. Freitas--Marc’s English teacher--has publicly told his classes after a popular couple broke up a week earlier: “I don’t think dating in high school is very wise. In fact, unless you can picture yourself comfortably married within a year, you shouldn’t be dating at all no matter what your age.” (Note: Mr. Freitas did meet his wife in high school.)

After reading The Fault in Our Stars and completing the final in-class discussion about it, Ms. Storms--Carly’s English teacher--reminded all of her students that it’s never too early to meet the love of your life.

10 Reasons Being Single in Your Teens is the Best

Seventeen Magazine

- 1. You can crush on ~anyone~, ~any time~, ~anywhere~. This is a beautiful thing. Cutie in math class? On it. That guy sitting in your row at the movie theater? Yep. That girl you stumbled across on TikTok who has the coolest taste in music on the planet? Uh huh.
- 2. You have time to do a million things. Like going to swim practice, making smoothies at Devon's house, and babysitting little Aidan next door. And that's only Monday. If you were in a relationship and spending all your free time with bae, you might not have time for all the awesomesauce that's currently in your life.
- 3. You're learning exactly who you are. Figuring out who you are is hard enough without the added pressure of focusing on how to be a girlfriend, too. When you're single, you don't have to worry if you're into fantasy football because Tyler's into it, or if you actually like it because you're good at it.
- 4. Your girl squad rivals Taylor Swift's. Not saying that girls in relationships can't have amazing friendships too, but when you're single, your girl squad is everything. You don't have to worry about splitting your time, or if your friends and S.O. get along, so your bond with your besties is stronger than ever.
- 5. It's NBD if you've never officially dated anyone. That's super common in high school and even college, so you're not alone.
- 6. You always get to choose what to watch on Netflix. Let's face it, compromising on a two-hour movie sucks.
- 7. You're saving a ton of money. When you're dating someone, you're constantly dropping $10 on pizza, or $50 on killer concert tickets for their birthday. And then there's all the money you're spending on gas to drive back and forth between your houses all the time.
- 8. No one gets jealous when you stare at Harry Styles' dreamy green eyes for, like, 10,000 hours. Or write fan fic about Harry sweeping you off your feet and spending his entire year off from One Direction traveling the world together. Or when you snap pics of you and Harry with hearts and "Mrs. Harry Styles" drawn all over them.
- 9. You can pick the best college for you without worrying about what it means for your relationship. There's no stressing over whether you're applying to the same schools, or if you want to try a long-distance relationship. The #1 priority? YOU. Where do YOU want to go to school? What do YOU want to do with your life? What makes sense for YOU?
- 10. You can focus 100 percent on whatever's going on with Haleb and Spoby and Ezria. Relationship drama on TV is stressful enough, k thx? No need to add IRL relationship drama. Plus when it's just you and your girls, it's an unspoken rule that Tuesday is PLL night, no questions asked. Nobody interrupts you every five seconds to ask dumb questions about who Charles is, or whines to alternate channels with the show bae wants to watch at the same time.
